Never Give Up Mar 17 2021 Depression is real. Even one small trigger is enough to survive. After the sudden death of his psychiatrist father, the son sets on a journey to his father's unexplored world of patients and their problems, only to find a set of blank suicide notes. Having never shown interest in his father's profession, the inquisitiveness triple folds and the son contemplates whether his father was really a good psychiatrist. Finding blank suicide notes, no names of the patients are helping him. The only possible communication he finds is the patients' addresses. With his wedding nearing, the son finds the suicide stories. As he reads through their sentimental and depressed lives, he can't help but stumble upon an unusual suicide note. The stories are then told by each of the patients. The story first uncovers their problems and then on how they each contemplated suicide. After exhausting all the suicide stories, the son invites them to his wedding; thankful for the addresses on the suicide files. But, does he have high hopes? A hope that they would attend his wedding – a hope that, after all, his father was not bad at his profession; a hope that his father had indeed cured some people. Will they make it to the wedding? Will there be a survival story or just their depressing stories?

The Art Of Not Giving Up Nov 24 2021 We as humans are sociable creatures the humans are the most sociable creatures on earth because we literally could not survive without helping each other. As humans are some of the most sensitive animals on earth, however at the same time we are the most intelligent as well. Thus, at the beginning of humanity people have lived in small, yet organized groups because individually the chances of surviving were practically inexistent, so if an individual will be kicked out of the group because of violating the group rules, he will be dead for sure. Therefore, from that time each human has developed an instinct of sociability and integration, also an instinct of fear that is why we care so much about what other people think about us because inside us there is still an instinct that subconsciously tells us that is dangerous to walk alone.

Give Up Something Bad for Lent Sep 22 2021 During Lent each year, Christians give up something as an act of sacrifice and spiritual discipline. Often it is something like chocolate, knowing that after Easter Sunday they can once again enjoy what they have given up. James Moore challenges readers to take it further—to give up something spiritually that they would be better off not doing. He invites all to seek God's help to focus on eliminating one habit or attitude that is destructive. Imagine giving up envy, jealousy, self-pity, apathy, procrastination, gossip, resentment, or negative thinking, how much better life would be. The forty days of Lent are ideal to use this study and prepare to give up something bad while preparing to fully embrace the "Good News" of Easter. Study includes seven sessions, one for each Sunday in Lent and Easter Sunday. Each session features a Scripture reference, a personal reading, questions for personal reflection or group study, and closing prayer.
